Gas code of conduct

Ai Group – Inness Willox Chief Executive 13/11/2020

“I have been involved in the Government’s development of a voluntary code of conduct between gas suppliers and customers in line with the Government’s view of gas as an economic recovery lever”.

“They hope to finalise the voluntary code by February next year after discussions between gas producers and customers. Ai Group will be involved in the discussions on the code. I have said to the Government that any code has to include transparency on price inputs and a review or reporting mechanism. A range of industries are impacted by gas price and reliability and there needs to be a starting agreement on all sides that the market could work better and fairer”.

“The Government is very strong on the need for affordable reliable gas for domestic industry and is ready to intervene if necessary”.

“The government is looking for real action on a code of conduct and will oversee conversations in the weeks ahead and I would be interested in hearing your feed back
